Six Weeks to Agile

At Six Weeks to Agile, we know that change in an organization is often difficult. But with our laser focused process we can guide your team, department or organization through an Agile Transformation in just Six weeks, here's how we do it:

Sprint One (first two weeks)

BOOT CAMP

Our team of experts will come onsite and conduct an immersive boot camp not only with your development team but with all applicable stakeholders. We find that setting expectations across all key players is key to a successful implementation.

Sprint Two (second two weeks)

It is time to put thought into action! If you've ever learned how to play poker – you'll know what playing an "open hand" means. Our experts will guide a project team through an open hand style of executing the fundamentals of agile.

Sprint three (final two weeks)

Just as agile is an iterative process, so too is the agile transformation process. During this last phase, we will build off all previous momentum in the first two sprints and continue to assimilate agile practices into your team dynamics.
At the end of the first six weeks is our organic stopping point within our process. At this point your team will be able to decide if:

▶ You are the Agile experts now and no longer need our support in your transformation

▶ You would like to keep our team engaged to continue to support your transformation

▶ You decide that Agile is not the solution for your team and can recover some of the investment costs your organization has made
